About the National Museum of Mexican Art

The National Museum of Mexican Art (NMMA) opened its doors to the public in 1987 in the Harrison Park boathouse with less than 100 art objects and a budget of $900. Today, the Museum is one of the most prominent Latino organizations in the country with 190,000 annual visitors, a 10,000- piece Permanent Collection, and educational programs that have been recognized by the White House.

The Museum is known for its outstanding work in the visual and performing arts and in arts education. In fact, NMMA has exhibited more than 150 shows, including 20 traveling exhibitions. It was the first Latino arts organization in the United States to obtain accreditation and remains the only accredited Museum dedicated to Mexican art and culture.

Our Mission

The National Museum of Mexican Art stands out as one of the most prominent first-voice institutions for Mexican art and culture in the United States. Our founding mission is to showcase the beauty and richness of Mexican culture by sponsoring events and presenting exhibitions that exemplify the majestic variety of visual and performing arts in the Mexican culture; to develop, conserve and preserve a significant permanent collection of Mexican art; to encourage the professional development of Mexican artists; and, to offer arts-education programs.

Permanent Collection

The National Museum of Mexican Art's permanent collection is one of the largest in the nation and is the premier repository for Mexican Art in the U.S. Pieces in the collection include Mesoamerican artifacts, murals, and 20th Century print, paintings, and textiles as well as a large collection of folk art. Key works in the permanent collection are highlighted in the Nuestras Historias: Stories of Mexican Identity from the Permanent Collection, the Museum's anchor exhibition on display now.

Visual Arts

Offering seven exhibitions annually, NMMA's approach to art exhibitions draws extensively from the Mexican tradition of utilizing the transformative power of visual arts for educational purposes. The prestigious exhibitions developed at the Museum utilize a framework for examining complex social issues. These exhibitions specifically aim to foster necessary cross-cultural dialogues. Artwork on the gallery walls serve as inspiration for introspection and social change.

Arts Education

The National Museum of Mexican Art offers high-quality programs within three program areas: school programs, teacher professional development, and children and family programs. Our knowledgeable and experienced arts education staff serve over 52,000 students, teachers, children, and families annually with the aim of expanding knowledge and appreciation of Mexican art and culture. In addition, the Yollocalli Arts Reach initiative offers arts education and career training opportunities to hundreds of teens each year.

Performing Arts

Various performances, including the annual Sor Juana Festival attract thousands of spectators each year. Honored guests have included author Sandra Cisneros, artist Ester Hernandez, and musicians Eugenia Leon and the Mariachi Divas. In addition, the Museum hosts the Día del Niño Health Walk and Family Festival. This free, day-long festival attracts 3,000 individuals and offers free on-site health screening while also providing live performances, art activities, health and fitness games, and a 2.1-mile health walk.
